

Pat Strand, owner of Total Home Remodeling, may be a respected and award-winning home remodeling expert, but in reality, his preferred role is one that speaks to service.

“Our job is to fully serve our clients,” he indicated. “It is not about getting recognition and awards for what we accomplish. It is always about how we make our clients great. That is our emphasis.” And in order to deliver on that commitment, Strand and his team focus on one primary goal with each and every project, and that is simply doing the job well, which requires three simple tools that exist outside of the traditional tool box: talking, guiding and understanding.

“We walk an exploratory path with our clients, exhausting all possibilities before beginning the project,” expressed Strand, who will work tirelessly to ensure his clients receive precisely what they want in their home remodeling project. “We spend more time on the front end, planning and preparing, than we do in the actual construction, as we want to ensure our clients are fully satisfied with the end result. When they understand what the process will be, the outcome is better.”

It’s no secret, then, that the folks at Total Home Remodeling are bona fide experts in their craft. Just one look at their portfolio says it all and gives strong testament to their unwavering motto: Innovate. Ignite. Indulge. If it’s perfection, creativity and excitement you desire in any home remodeling project that has been on your mind, then the Total Home Remodeling gurus stand at the ready to deliver all that, and more. Just let these before and after photos speak for themselves...

TRENDING...

Strand has noticed an increased trend towards some pretty cool and fun elements, such as the use of reclaimed materials, unique tile with textures and patterns, custom iron railings, and as always, the popular open floor plan.

“We are removing load bearing walls to open up floor plans to create a gathering environment for family and friends,” noted Strand.
