“We are open to whatever makes the customer happy, whether it’s their own unique plans or revising our own,” said Jeff Robinson, President of J.S. Robinson Fine Homes, who personally hand-picks and assembles his team, which is known for meticulous craftsmanship. “The fun part for us is seeing a family really happy. We are all about delivering an outstanding experience for our clients.”

While there are many facets and factors that go into a J.S.

Robinson Home, the make-up of each one revolves around three primary elements: design, value and service. When you build a home, you expect impeccable design, lasting value and outstanding customer service. J. S. Robinson Fine Homes never misses the mark to that end, remaining fully committed to excellence and integrity, all of which flourish in a unique team environment that gives its people the power to be their best while simultaneously delivering the best. Their process is simple, and their dialogue is straightforward, honest and always delivered with respect for the clients.

In terms of design, J.S. Robinson continually keeps the wheels of creativity spinning and at present has eight new floor plans rolling out in 2018 alone, and the company’s plan is to introduce a new plan every other month. Buyers are invited to adjust one of J.S. Robinson’s plans or are more than welcome to suggest a plan of their own. Jeff will be there with them at the initial consultation as he draws up the proposed plans to the client’s satisfaction and desires. As an added bonus, J.S. Robinson provides an in-house decorator who will work directly with each client to guide and direct them as they select various décor items for their new home.

A J.S. Robinson home is also synonymous with value. This is a team with over 100 years of combined experience, and each player on the team is fully committed to providing the utmost in customer service and care while simultaneously integrating the highest quality of products and materials. Cutting corners is never an option with this company.

The biggest foundation upon which each J.S. Robinson home is built is one of that of superior customer service. Excellence in this regard has always been a key component of J.S. Robinson’s business strategy. In fact, their customer service is practically legendary. After all, good service equates to good business. J.S. Robinson understands what customers want. This team also understands what it does best. At the intersection of those two philosophies is where excellence is born.

J.S. Robinson simply abides by the philosophy that customer service is not just what a company does; it is who they are. It is a way of conducting business that requires them to bring their best to every transaction. And apparently, word always spreads quickly about the amazing experiences people are enjoying while building a J.S. Robinson home.

“From the time we saw the architect’s first drawing until the final closing on our new house, we couldn’t have been more pleased with J.S. Robinson,” noted one homeowner. “Jeff Robinson and his team of professionals took us carefully and patiently through each step of construction. We were impressed with the high quality of the work and the products that went into the building of our home. Every single person we dealt with was courteous, accommodating and knowledgeable. They went out of their way to make sure we would be happy with our home. Once we moved in, their excellent service continued.”

It is easy to see why so many people would recommend J.S. Robinson without hesitation. If your question is “Where do I find a quality home builder,” the answer is “J.S.
