

Albert Einstein was once quoted as saying, "Logic will get you from A to B. Imagination will take you anywhere." Applying that sentiment to the diverse and comprehensive architectural portfolio of Scott Bickford simply translates to his understanding that imagination is what envelops the world.

Craftsmen, Traditional, Contemporary home or any other style, Bickford appreciates the process of taking a client from the initial desire to the final product.

"We try to design what our clients like," emphasized Bickford, who has established a highly creative team of specialized architects and designers that is dedicated

As founder and owner of the award-winning Bickford + Company Residential Architects, Bickford is known for his ability to consistently flex his creative muscles to such an extent that innovation and inspiration take on entirely new meanings. Whether designing a Cape Cod, Colonial, to the best in custom residential design services. Each design is expressly based on the individual needs and desires of the client. As new home developments expand and grow further away from the heartbeat of the city, however, Bickford's schedule of assignments has moved somewhat in a different direction.

"Many clients today want to stay closer in. As a result, we are seeing more work with tear-downs, remodels and in-fills," indicated Bickford. "We regard the house not just as an abstract exercise of the designer's artistic virtuosity and technical skill, but also – indeed, primarily – as an adjunct to the client's lifestyle and as an expression of the client's character, values and status."

Although recent events with COVID-19 have created a slight change in how Bickford conducts business, clients can still be assured of a highly positive and favorable experience.

"We do conduct phone meetings and email drawings to our clients," indicated Bickford, whose strong resume of work completed across the region have given him the continued confidence and success to conduct business in this regard, as he is accustomed to the process. However, if a client prefers a one-on-one meeting with Bickford, that can be arranged in accordance with all CDC guidelines for health and safety. While face-to-face meetings are preferable when graphics are involved, Bickford and his team are more than willing to conduct meetings with clients in a manner that makes the clients and all other parties involved the most comfortable.

"When we meet with a client sitting at the table with the drawings, we can quickly tweak those drawings and resolve any issues in minutes," explained Bickford.

Because of the fully-integrated approach with the client, keen insight is acquired that allows Bickford to develop the one-of-a-kind designs for which he is respectfully living space into place.

"I like the challenge of figuring things out for clients," he expressed. "Tastes are known. What Bickford enjoys most about his craft is the challenge of putting all of the pieces together for a home, which he relates to putting client's desires for a ever-changing, and it's fun to keep up with the latest aesthetic tastes and desires." ■

Bickford noted that a few years ago, people were leaning towards a more modern aesthetic. Today, however, many of his clients prefer a fresher approach to a traditional look, such as a modern farmhouse or a French modern design.

"Often clients don't want to be too ultra-contemporary but still appreciate the fresher, brighter and more open spaces of this approach."
